About This Report

Research shows that the most successful people share the common trait of self-awareness. They're able to more quickly recognize situations that will make them more successful. As such, it's easier for them to find ways of achieving objectives that resonate and align with their motivations. They also understand their limitations and where those situations in which they're not as effective. They're able to anticipate what will not inspire them or motivate them to succeed. Those who understand their natural motivators better are far more likely to pursue the right opportunities, for the right reasons, and get the results they desire.

Background

The Motivators assessment is the result of Dr. Edward Spranger's and Gordon Allport's combined research into what drives and motivates an individual. The seven dimensions of value discovered between these two researchers identify the reasons that drive an individual to utilize their talents in the unique way they do. Motivators will help you understand your motivations and drivers, providing a clear course on how to maximize your performance by achieving better alignment and passion for what you do.

The Elements of the Motivation Index

This Motivation Index is unique to the marketplace in that it examines seven independent and unique aspects of motivation. Most similar instruments only examine six dimensions of motivation by combining the Individualistic and Political into one dimension. This assessment remains true to the original works and models of two of the most significant researchers in this field, thus delivering to you a profile that truly helps you understand your own unique motivations and drivers. In addition, the Motivation Index is the first to use a click & drag approach to ranking the various statements in the instrument, which makes taking the instrument more intuitive, natural and in the end you can actually create the order you see in your mind on the screen. Finally, the Motivation Index instrument contains the most contemporary list of statements to make your choices more relevant to your life today, which helps ensure the most accurate results possible.

A closer look at the seven dimensions

Motivation helps influence behavior and action and can be considered somewhat of a hidden motivation because they are not readily observable. Understanding your Motivation helps to tell you why you prefer to do what you do. It is vital for superior performance to ensure that your motivations are satisfied by what you do. This drives your passion, reduces fatigue, inspires you and increases drive.

The Seven Dimensions of Motivation measured in this report are:

Aesthetic - a drive for balance, harmony and form.

Economic - a drive for economic or practical returns.

Individualistic - a drive to stand out as independent and unique.

Political - a drive to be in control or have influence.

Altruistic - a drive for humanitarian efforts or to help others altruistically.

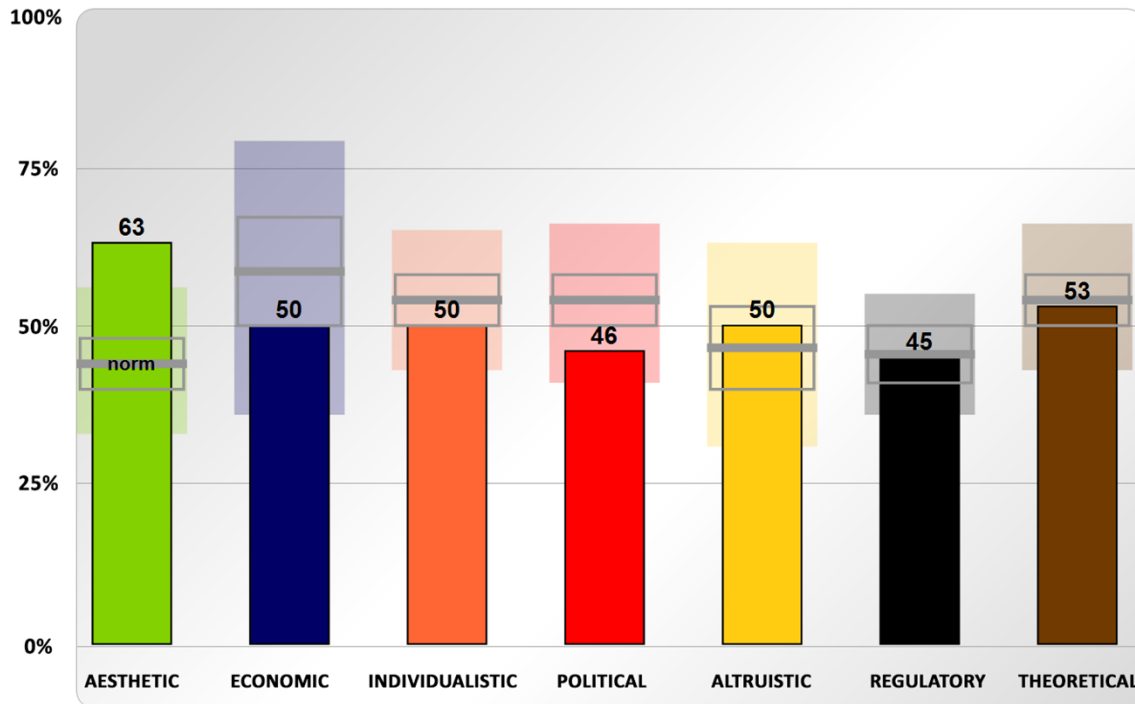

Regulatory - a drive to establish order, routine and structure.

Theoretical - a drive for knowledge, learning and understanding.

Executive Summary of Sample's Motivation

- Aesthetic - Very High
 You tend to think “alternatively” and will likely seek personal fulfillment, creative alternatives, and peace of mind rather than the status quo.
- Economic - Average
 You will balance yourself between being satisfied with what you have and a need for more.
- Individualistic - Average
 You can both lead and follow and can be flexible between taking a stand or sitting quietly.
- Political - Low
 You are a better collaborator and won't likely seek position power or authoritative roles.
- Altruistic - Average
 You are able to balance your own needs and the needs of others on the team.
- Regulatory - Average
 You understand structure but will not be bound by another's idea if it does not work for you.
- Theoretical - Average
 You can rely on both new information and what has worked in the past when making decisions.

Chart your descriptors for a better sense of what drives your motivation.

The motivator word matrix translates your numeric score into a one-word description and places each word in a relative position to other descriptors.

By labeling your numeric score with one word you can better understand, describe and locate both your motivator orientation and its direction.

Your Aesthetic Motivator

The Aesthetic Motivator: Strong desire and need to achieve equilibrium between the world around us and ourselves (within) while creating a sustainable work/life balance between the two. Creative, imaginative, arty, mystical and expressive, this style may redefine or resist real world approaches to current challenges.

General Traits:

- You support creativity in others and promote form and harmony in the work environment.
- You may like rewards that are not always attached to economic rewards, and may include other types of appreciation.
- You may prefer some solitary time to allow personal "re-balancing" or reflection.
- You will utilize creativity and artful expression to persuade or influence others.

Key Strengths:

- You will bring a creative outside view to discussions.
- For you, form may hold more interest than function.
- You enjoy bringing people together who share common interests.
- You are able to defuse a tense situation with a humorous quip or comment.

Motivational Insights:

- You support willingness to bring form or harmony to haphazard systems or workspace areas.
- You don't allow others to over-use or abuse your creative nature.
- You offer ample opportunity for adjustments in surroundings and approaches to getting things done.
- You allow for outside activities other than strictly work related all the time.

Training/Learning Insight:

- You link new knowledge to new ways to be creative or achieve better harmony and balance in work and life.
- You have the ability to connect training and development to other's needs and interests.
- As you learn new things in training or professional development, attempt to link those to your ability to see new or creative solutions in the future.

Continual Improvement Insights:

- You could use the creative mode as a safety blanket to avoid having to be overly practical.
- You may need to focus on the practical or economic side of an issue more frequently.
- You could benefit from being a little more pragmatic.
- Remember that it is OK that some don't appreciate artistry, balance or harmony as much as you.

Your Economic Motivator

The Economic Motivator: The motivation for security from self-interest, economic gains, and achieving real-world returns on personal ventures, personal resources, and focused energy. The preferred approach of this motivator is both a personal and a professional one with a focus on ultimate outcomes.

General Traits:

- This score should not be confused with average economic achievement. Many executives and others who score in this area may have already achieved substantial economic goals of their own. As a result, money itself may no longer motivate like it used to.
- The pattern of responses when compared to others in the business community indicates that there would be no visible "greed factor" in the interaction you have with others.
- The drive and motivational factors which tend to lead people who score like you should be measured against other peaks on the Values graph.
- Since the majority of people score near the mean, this indicates an economic motivation much like that of the average American businessperson.

Key Strengths:

- What motivates people who score like you? It's more than money alone; it's some of the other peaks that occur on the Values graph.
- You are a good team player in helping others with projects and initiatives without requiring an economic return of your own.
- You are not an extremist and therefore a stabilizing force when economic issues emerge.
- You are able to balance both needs and perspectives of those with substantially different economic drives.

Motivational Insights:

- Remember that your score range is near the national mean for Economic drive and that you don't score as an extremist on this scale.

Training/Learning Insight:

- You typically don't come to the training session asking, 'How much more am I going to earn as a result of this course?'
- You may be somewhat flexible in preferences both cooperative and competitive learning activities.
- Because your score is near the national mean, please check other Values graph peaks and troughs to obtain additional professional development insights.
- Your score is like those who engage in training and development activities in a supportive manner.

Continual Improvement Insights:

- You should assist in those areas or projects where there may be greater financial reward.
- You should allow space for those with higher economic drive factors to demonstrate their strengths or voice their ideas.
- If there is already a level of economic comfort, you may need to allow greater voice to those who haven't yet achieved their own economic comfort zone.
- There may be times when you may need to take a stronger stand on some issues related to economic drives or incentives.

Your Individualistic Motivator

The Individualistic Motivator: Need to be seen as autonomous, unique, independent, and to stand apart from the crowd. This is the drive to be socially independent and have opportunity for freedom of personal expression apart from being told what to do.

General Traits:

- You show the ability to take a leadership role when asked and also to be supportive team member when asked.
- You are generally not considered an extremist on ideas, methods, or issues in the workplace.
- You have the ability to take a stand on an issue when necessary, to yield position when necessary, and to do both with equal sincerity.
- Those who score like you would probably not be considered controversial in their workplace ideas or transactions.

Key Strengths:

- You are able to take a stand with emphasis, or to be a more quiet member supporting a position.
- You may be considered flexible and versatile without being an extremist.
- You are able to see both sides of the positions from those with higher and lower Individualistic scores.
- You are able to follow or lead as asked.

Motivational Insights:

- Remember that you score like those with a high social flexibility, that is, you can assume an appropriate leadership role for a team, or be a supportive team member as the situation requires.
- Remember that you show the ability to get along with a wide variety of others, without alienating those with opinions in extreme positions on the spectrum.
- You act as a balancing or stabilizing agent in a variety of team environments.
- You bring an Individualistic drive typical of many professionals, i.e., near the national mean.

Training/Learning Insight:

- You are able to be a flexible participant in training and development programs.
- You tend to enjoy both team-oriented and individual or independent learning activities.
- You will be a supportive member of the training experience from the viewpoint of this Values dimension.
- Because this score is near the national mean, please check other higher and lower Values areas to obtain additional insight into learning preferences.

Continual Improvement Insights:

- Without necessarily picking sides, you may need to take a stand on some issues related to individual agendas.
- To gain additional insight, you should examine other values drives to determine the importance of this Individualistic drive factor.
- You should allow space for those with higher Individualistic drives to express themselves in appropriate ways.
- You should avoid criticizing those with higher or lower Individualistic drives, since all Values positions are positions deserving respect.

Your Political Motivator

The Political Motivator: Being seen as a leader, while having influence and control over one's environment and success. Competitiveness and control is often associated with those scoring higher in this motivational dimension.

General Traits:

- You have the ability to take or leave the control-factors of group leadership roles.
- You are able to understand the needs of those on the team who are highly competitive, as well as those who tend to be more cooperative.
- A score near the mean indicates that the Political (power seeking) drive is not your primary motivational factor.
- You may be seen as a stabilizing force in day-to-day team operations.

Key Strengths:

- You bring flexibility to the team. Able to lead when asked, but able to support when asked as well.
- You are a stabilizing force on the team.
- You are able to appreciate the needs of both the higher and lower Political individuals on the team.
- You are perceived by others on the team as neither dictatorial nor dependent with regard to team projects and goals.

Motivational Insights:

- Don't forget that you have the ability to be a stabilizing agent between high-control and high-support on special team functions and initiatives.
- You bring a power seeking drive typical of many business professionals, since your score is very near the national mean on this scale.
- Give your input to the team in order to gain a middle-of-the-road insight and understanding of work related issues.
- Review other Values drives that might be higher or lower than the Political score in this report in order to gain a greater understanding of specific keys to managing and motivating.

Training/Learning Insight:

- You score like those who are supportive in a variety of work activities and development.
- You will respond with flexibility to either cooperative or competitive team activities.
- You score like those who participate openly in training activities without trying to dominate the event.
- You show ability to lead a training event as well as support and participate.

Continual Improvement Insights:

- You may need to shift gears into either a more supportive role or a greater leadership role at times.
- When issues of team leadership emerge, you may need to take a more visible stand on some problem-solving situations.
- Examine other Values drives in this report in order to gain increased understanding of areas for continuous improvement.

Your Altruistic Motivator

The Altruistic Motivator: An expression of the need or energy to benefit others at the expense of self. At times, there's genuine sincerity in this dimension to help others, but not always. Oftentimes an intense level within this dimension is more associated with low self-worth.

General Traits:

- You are able to see the points of view from both the higher and lower Altruistic score locations.
- You have a good sense for when to freely help others and when to say "No."
- You will not create an imbalance between your own needs and those of others.
- You can be a good mediator between those who give too much and those who don't give enough.

Key Strengths:

- You have a solid balanced view of helping others without doing everything for them.
- You possess a realistic and practical approach to helping others help themselves.
- You appreciate the need to help others without sacrificing one's own self too much.
- You are willing to pitch in and help others as needed.

Motivational Insights:

- You are practical in how much to help others versus other objectives.
- You possess a healthy balance between a self focus and a focus on others.
- You will strike a moderate level of giving and taking in interactions with others.
- You have a very typical level of appreciation for others relative to the general working world.

Training/Learning Insight:

- You would be more motivated by incorporating other motivators that are higher in drive and score locations.
- You are flexible between learning with a team or learning independently.
- You enjoy learning that highlights both your own personal gain and some altruistic aspect as well.
- You are likely supportive of the trainers themselves.

Continual Improvement Insights:

- You will be more influenced by other motivations in the report that are higher and when connected with, will return much more passion and drive.
- You might benefit from taking more of a lead, as opposed to waiting for others to lead.
- You need to know that efforts to help others are practical and deliver a business benefit as well.
- You should respect those who may not share your interest in understanding or benefiting others.

Your Regulatory Motivator

The Regulatory Motivator: A need to establish order, routine and structure. This motivation is to promote a black and white mindset and a traditional approach to problems and challenges through standards, rules, and protocols to color within the lines.

General Traits:

- You think flexibility and creativity are good as long as they are not out of control.
- You are likely to have your own specific "way" of doing many things.
- You respect tradition a lot.
- You believe in sticking to what works.

Key Strengths:

- You maintain timelines and meet deadlines.
- You maintain focus throughout projects.
- You are efficient and effective in organizing tasks and most work.
- You take pride in things that support tradition like national history, honor, duty.

Motivational Insights:

- Work quickly to correct missing needs or inaccuracies to maintain productivity.
- You should avoid disrupting your schedules and flow unnecessarily.
- You prefer a structured and routine environment to work in.
- Be patient when introducing new concepts or procedures. Give ample to adapt.

Training/Learning Insight:

- You will prefer learning activities that are structured and detailed.
- You are a well disciplined learner.
- You like to understand the why behind the what when learning new things.

Continual Improvement Insights:

- Explore a little. Discovering new ways to do things can be rewarding.
- You shouldn't get too hung up on the rules.
- You should realize that others have their own way of doing things too and be open to that.
- When in a high change environment, remember to be flexible.

Your Theoretical Motivator

The Theoretical Motivator: The desire to uncover, discover, and recover the "truth." This need to gain knowledge for knowledge sake is the result of an "itchy" brain. Rational thinking (frontal lobe), reasoning and problem solving are important to this dimension. This is all about the "need" to know why.

General Traits:

- You like to develop quick utilities or procedures that are a new way to look at existing job responsibilities.
- You may prefer learning-based events or conferences over a small economic incentive.
- You may be attracted to new and cutting-edge ideas and concepts.
- You are willing to take risks to learn something new.

Key Strengths:

- When others (internal or external) have a question, even if you aren't familiar with it, you can usually create solutions.
- You have a stable, knowledge-driven ethic.
- Others on the team may seek you out to answer their questions because they know of your strong knowledge base.
- You know a little about most everything and are conversant about it.

Motivational Insights:

- Identify your interests and seek related information. Topical mail, brochures, and info-sheets... don't throw them into the recycle bin.
- You can be a constructive critic for new ideas or when evaluating existing projects and protocol.
- If there is a learning-based event to be planned, be certain you are involved. If there is an external learning-based event on the calendar, be certain you have the opportunity to attend.
- You sometimes prefer incentives or bonuses are earned as tickets to a special event: Consider cultural events that are not just sports related.

Training/Learning Insight:

- You score like those who may have their own on-going personal development program already in progress.
- You enjoy learning even for its own sake and will be supportive of most training and development endeavors.
- You can be depended upon to do your homework... thoroughly and accurately.
- You are actively engaged in learning both on and off the job.

Continual Improvement Insights:

- You score like some who need coaching on time management.
- Your sense of urgency may vacillate, depending on the intellectual importance you assign to the issue.
- You may be somewhat selfish at times in sharing ideas with others, until others have established their own technical credibility.
- You don't rush from one learning experience to another. You make certain there are some practical applications.

Guidelines to help you explore and apply what is in this report.

1. The scores in this report are a snapshot in time. These scores represent your preference-pathways (desires, such as being in control or not) at the time you completed the survey. These are not lifelong motivators from which you have no choice or power to influence. Your scores are not the end of your learning they are the beginning of what you have learned.
2. There are no good or bad scores to have, but there are consequences. If you do not like the level of effort you feel toward your goals, how you are behaving toward others or how others are behaving toward you, you can influence them through intended behavior and emotions (See your DISC).
3. The key is to understand your motivational preferences so you can flex with the situation to encourage progress.

What works

- Decide what level of effort and intensity (energy) you want to use moving forward.
- Pick one simple behavior such as how long you take to think through a problem or how you endeavor to get what you need from someone.
- Make it easier to do using your motivational orientation you have right now, rather than finding a greater or a more difficult motivational element.
- It is important for you to develop a practical understanding of your own motivational orientation so you do not trick yourself into feeling you lack motivation. We are all motivated but we may lack the “emotional energy” (your natural/concealed DISC graph) for the process of getting what we want.

What is proven not to work?

- Not starting or giving up.
- Getting more information. Information may help to change your attitude and intention but information alone does not work well to change your behaviors. Advice is hard to give and receive. When you hear advice, you may not be sure it will work for you. The way to get unstuck is not becoming extreme by exaggerating your efforts or stopping them altogether. Try doing something small and then look at the evidence.
- Wanting to get better at something is easy. Sticking with small changes is a different story.
- Avoid pursuing “ideal motivational activities or work.” Instead, improve your pursuit of vital work/activities using your natural motivational orientation within this report.

Tiny step big results plan

You are only a few behaviors away from making progress.

Where do I currently excel at work and what motivators are in play already?

Which motivators don't need any additional attention?

With which motivators am I currently struggling and need an extra boost?

Using my understanding of my motivational orientation, which types of additional motivations would work best for me?

Using my understanding of my motivational orientation, which types of additional motivations would not work for me right now?

Now the next step is to reduce the harmful elements on our motivational pathways. Choose one harmful influence on your motivational orientation (take in small steps) I will act on today. (Wash, rinse, and repeat).

Choose one positive influences on your motivational orientation (take in small steps) I will act on today. (Wash, rinse and repeat).

My report uncovered the following orientations that I need to build defenses for to better reduce harmful effects on my motivation. List up to three (3).

I have learned that we all are motivated to get better but we get stuck with the process we must go through to move toward what we want. How can I make the process of making progress smaller and simpler? List up to three (3).

When I take the above steps, I will remind myself the difference between moving ahead and stopping is very small. (Write this previous sentence on a post it notes and place it by the door of your office, bedroom or bathroom so you can physically “tap” it to solidify it in your mind).

So Now What?

This report is filled with information about your seven independent and unique aspects of motivation. So now, you have a profile that truly helps you understand your own unique motivations and drivers.

There are many suggestions in each of the seven motivators sections of this report, particularly the continual improvement insights, for you to apply this valuable information. Take the next step and take the actions required to make improvements in the specific motivators sections most important to you and your success.

Do not put this report on a shelf or in a file. You now have the opportunity to use this information to open up a meaningful dialogue with others to improve all your motivations and relationships. Use this report as a reference tool. There is a lot of information in it and it is not meant to be digested in just one reading.

Have fun with making a few minor changes in each of your seven motivators and experience your improved results. You might be pleasantly surprised!

Other Assessments?

There are a total of five foundational assessments which both measure and educate users on the five different, but equally important, aspects of human behavior and/or cognition. As such, they form the foundation of our catalog and we have termed them our five Core Assessments:

- 1. DISC - Our most popular assessment and the world's #1 behavioral profiling tool. DISC provides a highly detailed analysis of each individual's Natural (i.e. personal/ internal) and Adaptive (i.e. workplace/external) behavioral styles. An individual's behavior is often the strongest indicator of fit; whether that be within a particular job, as the member of a team or as the leader of an organization. In essence, DISC predicts "How?" a person will behave within a given role or situation. Likewise, it offers the prescriptive lessons necessary to maximize the outcome of any interpersonal or workplace communication.
- 2. Motivators - The perfect companion assessment to pair with DISC, Motivators measures the Seven Universal Dimensions of Motivation that drive each of us: Aesthetic, Economic, Individualistic, Political, Altruistic, Regulatory and Theoretical. Where-as DISC predicts "How?" a person will behave, Motivators explains "Why?" If you are only using DISC, you are only scratching the surface of what assessments can offer individuals and organizations.
- 3. Hartman Value Profile (HVP) - The Hartman Value Profile offers the critical third piece to the human puzzle. Based upon the research of Robert S. Hartman's formal axiology, this unique assessment measures each individual's problem solving skills and their ability to avoid the blindspots associated with situational bias. In essence, the HVP assessment measures— with uncanny accuracy— an individual's critical thinking, judgment and decision-making abilities.
- 4. Emotional Intelligence (EIQ) - The Emotional Intelligence (EIQ) assessment helps users understand the correlation between the way they apply their current EIQ and the outcome of their interactions with others. This lends itself to improved decision-making, leadership, reading the emotions in others and engaging in a greater number of mutually beneficial workplace outcomes. Here is the key: EIQ can actually be improved and coached-up over time so it makes an excellent self-improvement assessment.
- 5. Learning Styles - Our fifth and final Core Assessment, Learning Styles, does just as its name implies: it identifies each individual's best means for learning and retaining new information. Some people like to process information through text, while others need visual support and images. Some learners best assimilate information alone, while others prefer to learn in groups. There are those who can grasp information intuitively, while others prefer to follow a strong sequential path. In short, understanding learning styles offers the key to maximizing an organization's training efficiencies, enlightening its management teams and even assembling top performing teams.
